EPITAPHS OF CASTLETON (VT.) CHURCH YARD.

The old church yard in Castleton is nearly one hundred years old. In it were buried many of the first settlers of the town, who emigrated from the states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Many of those older New England towns were thus brought into close relationship with Castleton. It occurred to the transcriber that if these epitaphs were published, great service would be rendered to the science of New England genealogy, therefore in the delightful autumn days of 1885, they were all transferred to paper, ready for the printer.

Most of the headstones and monuments are of the marble of Rutland county, and cut by hand before sawing and other improved methods of manufacture were adopted in the county.

The heads of the graves are nearly all to the north. Most of the original rhyming was done by Dea. Erastus Higley and Dr. Selah Gridley.

In Memory of Mr. Benjamin Ackley, who died March the 28th, 1796, in the 57th year of his age.

There the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

*Death called Jane long before her hour,
It call'd her tender soul, by break of bliss
From the first blossom, from the bud of joy
How from the summit of the grove befell,
And left it unharmonious. all its charm
Extinguish'd in the wonder of her song!*

Philander, Son of J. & J. Adams. died Sept. 11, 1807, aged 11 days.

*Happy infant, early bless'd
Rest in peacefull slumber rest
Early rescu'd from cares,
Which increase with growing years.*

Our dear little Allie.

Mr. Thomas H. Atwill, a celebrated instructor of Sacred Music, Died Jan. 20. 1814; Aged 50 years.

When friends approach where Atwill sleeps,

No voice, once his, their souls can cheere:

*When music charms, then memory
reaps,*

And mourns for strains that ended here.

'Twas songs divine he sung from 'choice,

*'Tis friendship bids his marble rise:
And friends still hope his heavenly voice*

Now sings Redemption in the skies.

In Memory of M^r Amos Bird. Died Sep; 16 1772 Æ 30

"Death, like an overflowing stream,
Sweeps us away; our life's a dream;
An empty tale; a morning flower,
Cut down and withered in an hour."
Bird is no more, he's numbered with the dead;

Dust & the shroud envolved his head.

The above inscriptions were on Bird's monument, which was a rough slab of Rutland county marble. The town of Castleton in 1842 erected a new monument to Col. Bird and moved his remains from the valley south of Castleton Corners into the church yard, with appropriate ceremonies. The monument consisted of a square spire, cap, die, plinth and base; all of Rutland marble. The following inscriptions were on it:

(On the south side.)

Castleton was Chartered 1761.

Erected Oct. 19, 1842, To the memory of Col. AMOS BIRD, by Citizens of Castleton and friends, as a tribute of respect to a worthy man born in Salisbury Conn. and died Sept. 16, 1772, aged 30 years.

(On the east side.)

Col. Bird was the first white man who asserted Dominion in Castleton, where he arrived in June 1766.

He was the first possessor of the soil for civilization and the first call'd to resign its leaving the fruits of his bold enterprise to others.

(On the north side.)

The mortal remains of Col Bird were first interr'd by his direction near his dwelling in the valley of Bird's Creek, two miles west of this place, and after seventy years, disinterr'd and here entomb'd, to wait the summons that awakes the dead.

AMBROSE, son of Michael & Mary DERWIN, died Jan. 10, 1846, Aged 20 years. & 9 Ms.

May he rest in peace.

Mr. James Brennan of Castleton, has furnished me with the following account of the Derwin family :

The Derwin family consisting of the widowed mother, three sons: Michael, Simon and Ambrose and 2 daughters Mary and Catherine, the latter a sweet little child four or five years old, came to Castleton not far from 1837; they were natives of the city of Dublin, Ireland, and had seen better days in their former home where the husband and father had been a well-to-do dealer, and they were a refined and educated family. Failing health induced Mr. Derwin to dispose of his business in Dublin, and visions of restored health and agricultural wealth induced the city-bred man to seek the shores of the new world, then as now the beacon light of Erin's children. He settled in Canada and bought a large farm but increasing ill health and lack of experience rendered his new vocation unprofitable, in fact, a failure, and he soon died.

The widow unable to carry on the farm, discouraged and every way unsuited with her surroundings saved a trifle from the wreck of what might have been under favorable circumstances, a comfortable competence, and with her family drifted into Vermont and for some reason located in Castleton. Michael and Simon the two oldest sons were painters by trade. Michael remained but a short time around Castleton; he died many years ago in Exeter, N. H. Simon remained with the family here. They resided for a time in a part of Judge Howe's office now the residence of Miss Whitlock, also in a portion of James McKean's house, later the property of Mrs. Thornton, recently destroyed by fire. The balance of their tarry here they lived in the house with the widow Gridley now the residence of Mrs. Dr. Perkins. In 1841-2 an epidemic of malignant scarlet fever raged in this section; more than one hundred young people, mostly children, died within the limits of the town of Castleton, among them sweet little Katie Derwin.

Ambrose learned the tailoring business of David Wilkinson, made an excellent workman and was profitably employed in Rutland, and nearly 21 years old when he was taken violently sick and died in the house of his employer in the early part of 1846, and was brought here by his sorrowing mother for burial.

Mary the oldest daughter, a gentle and refined young woman had been carefully educated in her native city, and in addition had passed three years at school in Paris, was a fine French scholar and quite accomplished in drawing and painting; but a serious illness about the time her education was completed left her quite deaf; this increased a natural diffidence and unfitted her for teaching for which she had otherwise the highest qualification. She and her mother were expert in the use of the needle and maintained themselves by sewing. Constant work and confinement undermined a constitution never any too strong, and in the early days of 1847 gentle Mary succumbed to that unrelenting malady, consumption, complicated with a disease of the heart. She died loved and respected by all who knew her. Soon after her death Mrs. Derwin left Castleton and went to reside with her son Simon who had located at or near Worcester, Mass. A few years ago she was living at an advanced age. Simon had married and prospered.

But when the trumpet's sound
Awakes the sleeping dust,
Eternal youth will crown
The triumph of the just.*

Miss Emma Higley of Middlebury, Vt., a great granddaughter of Dea. Brewster Higley has furnished the following account of him and his family:

Brewster Higley was born in Simsbury, Conn., March 3d, 1735.
He was the eldest son of Dea.
Brewster Higley, who was the eldest son of Brewster Higley, the third son and fifth child of Capt.
John Higley, one of the original settlers of Simsbury. Capt. John the business of the office for the year, and is very interesting and valuable. It also contains a list of the lands sold during the year, and the amount of the proceeds. It is subject should have.

is mentioned in the charter of the town signed by Gov. Treat, "14th of May 1685, by virtue of power to me granted by our late Sovereign Lord, King Charles the Second of Blessed memory!"

Capt. John had settled in Simsbury, in 1680, bought a farm of Capt. Wolcott, and the house where his son Gov. Roger Wolcott was born. Afterwards Gov. Jonathan Trumbull, a grandson of Capt. Higley was born in the same house. This house and farm were the early home of Brewster 1st, 2nd and 3d, and here each brought his bride. The last marriage is thus set forth in the town records of Simsbury:

"Ap. 7, A.D. 1757 Brewster Higley the 3d, son of Brewster Higley the 2nd, and Esther Owen daughter of John Owen and Esther Humphrey Owen his wife were joined in marriage by John Humphrey Esq. Their grandfather's name is Brewster, and grandmother's name Esther. Their father's name is Brewster, and mother's name Esther, so that there are three generations from grandfather and grandmother to grandson and granddaughter all of one name for male and one name for female: three generations all living! May the divine blessing rest on them and theirs to the latest posterity!" The town clerk was the good Deacon and Judge Owen the father of the bride.

Besides the farm Brewster Higley had charge of a saw mill, cider, and cider brandy distillery; was constable and tax collector. Then as the days of minute men came around he kept the roll of those present at each training day and the fines due for absence and for not bringing guns in order, etc.

His own name is on this roll, and carefully folded in a large book a commission as ensign with Gov. Trumbull's signature dated 28th Sept. 1777, and an accompanying record of service in the campaign that ended with Burgoyne's surrender.

How his interest in the Vermont Colonies was first awakened we can but conjecture.

An intimate friend, Capt. Noah Phelps, was in the Connecticut Company that came with Arnold to Castleton, and held the famous Council of War on the Village Green, before the taking of Ticonderoga.

The oldest son is said to have been with Ethan Allen in the Canada expedition in the summer and fall of 1775; and so we conjecture, he might have been one of the fifty who came up with Phelps to help take Ticonderoga.

Mrs. Higley's sister Theresa married Noah Smith, and they came to Manchester, Vermont, in 1715.

In October, 1778, Brewster Higley bought of Ephriam Buel a farm of 323 acres, bounded east by the farm of George Foote's; south by Gers' lake's; west by Samuel Moulton's; north by Whitlock Hill. There was standing on it a rude log cabin. Twelve hundred pounds was the price paid for this home in the wilderness, the next year after Burgoyne's invasion with its attendant tory and Indian outrages.

In May of 1779, the family went up and took possession. We must stop and look at them. Brewster forty-four years of age, in the prime of his manhood, six feet tall and broad shouldered, high forehead, high cheek bones, keen eyes, strong, en face, clear headed, brave, with tender heart that he must keep pler and was a little ashamed of.

 ye. Higley, forty; Brewster the est son, just twenty; Louise enteen, a brave, bright witted of; intelligent girl, the pet and comrade of her brother; Anne the timid one of the band, fifteen; Zil- pah, thirteen; Delight, ten; Eras- tus, seven; Esther not quite four,
 and Iola the yearling baby.

The family goods and chattels were packed in ox carts, Mrs. Higley and Louise rode horses and carried the younger children in their arms, and on pillions behind. The elder children walked with their father and two nephews Amasa
Alard and John Case.

When the roads became impassable for the loaded carts, Brewster sent his son on with the mother and children, to guide them on to the journey's end, and bring back the horses to help with the loads. But after they had gone his imagination suggested so many possible perils, that he walked the whole night and overtook the party just as they were mounting their horses for the next day's journey.
Louise was the first to discover him and relates how her heart was lightened as she saw him leaping from one fallen log to another and answered his cheery "hallo."

The Castleton account book begins with the entry "June 1779, for two bushels of wheat, £15 (50 dollars) George Foote." $25.00 a bushel for seed wheat!! "Ten pounds of flour 1s. 8d." is the next entry; then "a bushel of Indian corn 2s. 6d." Under date of May 1780, we find this significant entry:

"Nehemiah Hoyt, Dr. To four shillings cash for wolves."

And so the new house is begun.
 A larger log house was soon built which Mrs. Caswell remembers as standing behind the old red house in her childhood days. It was built in 1795.

The well and spice apple tree are all that now (1886) remain on the spot of this first house in the wilderness, although we have various and sundry articles that were brought from Connecticut with them. The book-case and some of the books, some crockery, the gun, apothecary scales, etc. The seed of the spice apple tree was brought from Connecticut, by Mrs. Higley, also Long Stem then called "Hog Stye," from its nearness to pig pen.

But we can scarcely, with the most vivid imagination, realize what a wilderness they had come into.
 The nearest neighbors were Gers- hom Lake, Richard Bentley, Sam- uel Moulton, and the dwellers in the fort,* the Footes and Cogswells.
 All the time they were in danger from foraging parties of British, Tories and Indians. Each spring to help in the sowing the crops came the rumors of another invasion like Burgoyne's.

One foraging party came and slept on the kitchen floor while the mother and daughters baked bread for them all night, finding it difficult to pass from moulding board to brick oven and not step on some body.

Once the word came from the fort that a skirmishing party might be along, and there was packing in

* The fort was not built till 1778

hot haste, while horses loaded with feather beds, blankets, silver spoons, and children, were led off Poultneywards to be out of the way; and calves, chickens and pigs were conveyed to a hiding place.

Another such rumor one dark night caused timid Annie to spring from her bed and rush with her little sister Esther, Mrs. Caswell's mother (Mrs. Sylvanus Guernsey) to the woods. They curled down behind a log and shivered with cold and fear till daylight and the elder brother's cheery whistling as he hunted for them, assured them the danger was over for that time.

In the spring of 1782, these rumors of a new invasion from Canada, assumed such a definite shape, that it was decided to send Mrs. Higley and Mrs. Lake each with an ox cart and load of young children to Connecticut to stay till better times. Some of the party were young enough to enjoy the trip no doubt, but baby Harley, the first Higley born in Castleton (Oct. 9th 1781) did not; and her lusty cries were long remembered by the dwellers along the road side. Louise volunteered to stay and keep house for her father and brother. She was not afraid. The brother at this time was a member of the garrison at the fort. Louise earned a barrel of flour by baking bread for the garrison that summer. Mr. Hall in his lectures on the "Forts of Vermont" tells how the commandant spent his evenings at Mr. Brewster Higley's quite often, and one night staid so late as to be locked out! This story fits in with a family tradition, that some commandant at the fort stole away the heart of the fair Louise, and then went away and forgot her. So that when she married the minister's son at West Rutland (Benajah Guernsey Roots), Jan., 1783, she did not give him her first love. The brother married the same year "the girl he left behind" in Connecticut, and brought his bride to a house just west of his father's, about where the Harris house now (1886) stands.

The coming of a man of so much intelligence, property, and executive ability to the little new settlement was duly appreciated by his townsmen. We read of him at once as moderator, justice of peace, town clerk, committee to engage minister, arrange for singing school (both paid by the town), draw up papers to the General Assembly, resolutions, etc., etc. The original draft of some of the papers we have, this one for example:

"To the Honorable General Assembly of the State of Vermont, in their adjourned session at Bennington, Jan. 31, 1782, the Petition of the Inhabitants of Pittsford and Castleton" "Humbly sheweth that your petitioners in their Frontier situation for several years past have been obliged to remove with their families and effects being Gravel exposed to the Enemy's Scouts of which account the Improvement of our farms and other business has very much suffered. Notwithstanding your Petitioners have not only Paid their Proportionate Part for the Support of War, but have likewise born the additional burden frequently scouting for our own Safety. These circumstances with many others induce your Petitioners to Pray that this Honorable General Assembly will Please to P except the Present Inhabitants of Castleton and Pittsford, from the Provision and Land Tax for the year ensuing."

As Justice of Peace it was one of his duties to solemnize and keep a record of marriages. Thirty-four are recorded in his book between the dates 1781 and 1792, also the Prayers offered before and after the marriage.

In 1784 the Congregational Church was formed and two years later the grand squabble began about where the new church should be built, whether upon the fort ground where the old one was, at Castleton Corners, near Landlord Remington's or elsewhere. Brewster Higley offered the land where the old cemetery is on the ground in front of it, and so helped settle that point. Afterwards he gave the land opposite the church green for a parade ground. He and Mrs. Higley united with the church in 1790. In 1793, he was chosen the second deacon.

The last decade of the century saw the disintegration of the large family. We have chronicled the marriages of Brewster 4th and Louise, Annie's followed in Sept. 1822, 1785. Then Delight married Ernos Merrill in 1789. The father himself officiated at these three elder daughters' weddings.

In 1794, occurred the death of Gideon Brewster Higley (2nd), in Connecticut. Quite an amount of his property came to the Castleton family in the distribution of his estate. A bushel of silver coin as part of his estate was expended for gold coins for each of the eight daughters and in journeying about with the invalid Zilpah, first to Connecticut, then to the recently discovered springs at "Saratoga." She continued to decline however and died 30th March 1798.

Meantime the elder son had a sharp attack of the Western fever, made a journey on foot, by the aid of Capt. John's compass to the wilds of Virginia and Ohio, and among the deaths in his record book the father puts down in grim grief and disappointment: "July 27th, 1779, Brewster removed with his family, viz: wife, three sons and three daughters with a desire to go to the Ohio, as I suppose."

Esther was married to Silvanus Guernsey on Thanksgiving day of this year, Rev. Lemuel Haynes of West Rutland, officiating. Erastus Higley and Esther Anna Guernsey, best man and bridesmaid. After the wedding as the guests began to disperse, the bride and bridesmaid who had long been intimate friends, wanted a word with each other. The house was full, and the weather too cold for muslin robed lassies to go far out doors. So they cuddled among the buffalo robes in a sleigh fastened near the door. Dr. Gridley's sharp eyes noticed the occurrence and quickly he sprang in and drove the team to Landlord Moulton's and then traded the pair off for a mug of cider. The discovery, pursuit and bringing back were not long delayed, and no ill will was harbored against the joke-loving doctor.

The marriage of Erastus and the fair bridesmaid occurred the following year, 9th October, 1798. And they set up a home for themselves in the house afterwards known as the Southmayd house.

In March 25, 1800, Iola married William H. Denison and went to West Rutland to live near her sisters Louise and Anne. And in October (13th), of the same year Delight died.

The winter of 1800-1, found the old red house with but the father, mother and the two youngest and Castleton-born daughters Harley and Zernah.

Nothing more striking than the marriage (Jan., 1804) of Harley to Jared Porter, son of Judge Porter, of Tinmouth, seems to have broken in upon the last quiet years of his life.

As his strength failed he gave up the mills and the farm more and more to Erastus, and he took care of his garden with its cherry trees, Connecticut grapes, asparagus, artichokes, etc., which still were growing there within my remembrance. He enjoyed the means of grace so near at hand, the rapidly improving State and country, his increasing family of grandchildren, their visits home and his visits to the old Connecticut home. And so grew mellow and ripened for his heavenly home which he entered 11th April 1805.

Zimri Howe, eldest son of John and Courance (Parker) Howe, was born at Poultney, Vt., Sept. 7th, 1786. Graduated at Middlebury College, in 1810. Studied Law in the office of Hon. Horatio Seymour, at Middlebury, and was admitted to the Bar in 1813. Commenced the Practice of Law in his native town
 (Poultney), where he married March 13, 1816, Hannah B. Horton, and resided until the spring of 1818, when having purchased a house and lot at Castleton, of the Hon. R. C. Mallory, he removed to that town, where he ever after lived; his death occurred July 11th, 1863, at the age of 76 years and 10 months. He was one of the Governor's Council from 1831 until 1835, and member of the State Senate in 1836 and 1837; and served as Assistant Judge of the Rutland County Court from 1838 to 1844.

He was a man noted for his public spirit; for the fearlessness with which he advocated and promoted every good cause, and opposed everything which he regarded as wrong. His integrity was of the strictest sort, his neighbors saying "that his word was as good as any man's bond."

[The foregoing sketch was furnished by Hon. John Howe of Castleton, son of Zimri. In addition it may be said that Judge Howe took an active part in the anti-masonic movement in 1833-4, and was largely concerned in the publication of an anti-masonic newspaper in Castleton during that period. The paper was published in the second story of his office, and singularly enough the same room was occupied by Lee Lodge No. 30, Free and Accepted Masons, in which they held their communications for several years after that lodge was moved from Hydeville to Castleton Village. — J. M. C.]

JAMES McKEAN, DIED DECEMBER 28, 1846, AGED 51 YEARS.

Mr. James Brennan of Castleton, furnishes the following account of Mr. McKean and his Family:

James McKean was a native of the county Sligo Ireland; and by trade a Tailor. I have no knowledge of the exact year of his emigration to this country. He carried on the tailoring business for a time in Benson, Vt., and located in Castleton about 1822.

Being an excellent mechanic and an energetic person his business rapidly increased in this, and from all the surrounding towns, and for many years he had the largest trade in custom tailoring ever conducted by any person in this section; employing at one time as many as journeyemen and apprentices, and operating besides, considerable male help. He was financially successful.

A few years after locating here he married Miss Lydia Jordan, a daughter of Stephen Jordan, one of the earlier inhabitants of Castleton. In March 1829 Mr. McKean purchased of Elihu Smith the large dwelling, erected by Robert Temple, about seventy years ago, and by him deeded to Mr. Smith in July, 1820. In those days it was considered one of the finest houses in the village. It was destroyed by fire March 17, 1886. Mr. McKean continued to reside in it until his death. He was survived by his wife, two sons, John T., and Henry B. McKean, and one daughter, Jennie McKean. Of these John T. the eldest was probably as fine a specimen of physical manhood as Castleton has produced. He studied medicine and was for a season an assistant physician in the South Boston Insane Asylum. He graduated here in the old Castleton Medical College about the year 1856, and not long after, located in California in the practice of his profession. Some years later failing health induced him to return east, to the home of his brother Henry in Iowa, where he died about sixteen or seventeen years ago (now, 1886).

Henry B. McKean, the younger of Mr. McKean's sons, learned the blacksmith's trade he of the late Capt. Hiram Billing and in 1850 went to California where he prospered, and returned east, locating about 1856 near Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where he is now substantial farmer. Soon after the date of his settling in Iowa, his mother sold the family residence here to Hyde Westover, and with her daughter joined him in his western home, where she was living a few years since. Jennie McKean, a handsome and accomplished young woman, married a Mr. Drake, an officer in an Iowa Regiment during the late civil war. She joined her husband during the operations against Mobile, and died there about the time of the surrender of that city, perhaps a short time before that event.

James McKean was a man of portly form and good appearance, hospitable and public spirited; he had improved by reading and study, a perhaps somewhat common early education, and became a man of rather more than ordinary intelligence and general information. He accumulated quite an extensive collection of books, embracing religious, historical and miscellaneous subjects. The writer has in his possession several of them given him nearly a quarter of a century since by a brother of Mr. McKean's then living here. On the fly leaf of each is traced in the bold and legible hand-writing of the former owner, his name and the date of purchase.

In addition to his residence and shop here he owned a lot of land half a mile north of the village of Castleton, now a portion of the farm of C. S. Sherman, and two farms in the north part of the town, since owned by Johnson Benedict, one of which is now the property of Thomas Murphy, and the other is owned by the widow of the late John Doyle.

William Sanford died March 24, 1866. Æ. 81 Yrs

Dr. James Sanford of Castleton, son of William, furnishes the following sketch of the family :

William Sanford was born in Pownal, Vt., Dec. 13, 1784. His father and mother, Oliver and Phebe Sanford, were buried in a little cemetery situated in the north part of Poultney, a few rods south of what is now known as "Smith's Saw Mill." Their graves are designated with stones bearing appropriate inscriptions.

William Sanford came to the town of Castleton in Oct., 1799 and continued to reside therein till the time of his death.

Feb. 13, 1812 he married Betsey Tuttle who resided in the north-eastern part of Poultney, Vt.

Nine children were born to them :

Laura (Mrs. John A. Whitlock) of Vinton, Iowa; Mary (Mrs. John Gilbert Whitlock); James, Franklin, Carlos and Clarissa (Mrs. L. W. Preston), now reside in Castleton, Vt.

Phebe (Mrs. James C. Hogle) is in Brooklyn, N. Y.

William Sanford held many offices of trust and was noted for his habits of industry, his strict honesty and sound judgment pertaining to the common affairs of life.

His estimable wife Betsey was not lacking in any of the good qualities necessary to secure a united family and a happy home.

This monument is raised as a sacred testimonial of her husband's affection.

Doct. SAMUEL SHAW, Aged 58 years.

The above is all there is recorded of Dr. Shaw on his head stone. He died near Clarendon Springs, Vt., Oct. 22, 1827, and his remains were brought to Castleton for interment.

The large Button-wood tree standing at the north-east corner of the Sandford House in Castleton Village was planted by him about ninety years ago. He rode horseback when visiting his patients, and on his way home one day he cut a limb of Button-wood for a riding stick; when he reached home he stuck it into the ground in his front yard where it continued to grow. It is now about three feet in diameter.

When his grandson Henry Shaw (Josh Billings), visited Castleton in the autumn of 1882, his wife carried home some of the limbs of the old tree as mementoes.

Dr. Shaw was a prominent physician in Castleton, and owned considerable property. He was quite a politician and was representative to Congress from 1808 to 1813.
